[Sri R. Shanmuga Rajeswara Sethupathi] [26th December 1956

with brushwood filling to prevent further damage along the embankment. Necessary caution boards were also put up for the safety of traffic. The old Nannal plantations close to the embankment of the river side near Paramakudi had been destroyed by the local people due to the fear of wild beasts taking shelter in the Nannal bush and as a result of this the soil had been erroded by the floods in the previous years and the river course had changed.

The road embankment in mile 45/6–8 of the road is partly damaged in certain places in the blacktop portion but the traffic has not at all been dislocated at this place. An estimate for Rs. 18,000 has been sanctioned by the Divisional Engineer (Highways), Ramanathapuram, for providing deflection groynes and strengthening the bund. Materials required for the work are being collected.
